the French theatre before a rather small audience. It was placed on the stage with the same cast as before. aion of the cooks and the chorus of the servants of the inn were excellent. Faistaff might truly exclaim, "What a sight, what a royal spectacle," as he complacently reviewed the array of dishes and white-aproned cooks. In addition to the many other absurdities of the North, M. Vert added another by dancing a pas suit, an accomplishment which we were not aware the original Faistaff could master. M. Vert's voice contrast-ed greatly with his admirable acting, being in worse condition than we ever heard before. It grated harshly in the beautiful trios with the Queen and Olivia. "Pour quoi vous en défendre," and "Foire publi cour s'est rendu." M. Anthelme should not force his fine voice too much, as it gives it a hard metallic tons at times which apthe beautiful trios with the Queen and Olivis, "Pour gwo was as defensive," and "Fotre point cours east rends. M. Anthelme should not force his fine voice too much as it gives it a hard metallic tone at times which appears foreign to it. This is a fault that M. Surmont care fully avoided in his rôle of Lord Lattiner. The manne in which some pairs of the dialogue, even one line at time, are set off with little scrape of delicious must showly much skill and cleverness in the composer. The hunting song in the second act is like a German coldized, and it was very well sung. In the romance of Shakepere, "Oh suis je," the bird-like warhings of Mile. Naddle, in response to the poet, were received with torrent of appliance. Her execution of the roulades, trill codenies, &c., in this access was fautiless. The Virsit Queen, with all her greatness, would be mospitused at find such a flight of notes set down to her. Of Mile Lattretuce it is unnecessary to any more than to endors our opinion of her singing and acting at the former representations of the opera. The management should see to lessening the Babel of noise that takes place behing the curtain furring the entr' actes, and dopt some othe plan of signaling the orchestra besides stamping and clapping hands on the stage. Zampa will be given to-mor row night, with M. Armand as a debateat.

Thalla Theatre.

Einmal Hundert Tausend Thaler was given last night at the Thalla theatre, and badly performed. With the excention of Mr. Ahlfeldt none of the actors knew their Then again the play is old, was written to sur matter of local rather than cosmopolitan interest. Thus the two characters, Zwickauer and Zittauer, two Berlin the two characters, Zwicksuer and Zittauer, two Berlin speculators of the Hebrew persuasion, very fairly impersonated by Messra. Klots and Winkel, are well known in Germany, and are as familiar to our Toutonic cousins on the other side as Artemus Ward or Ike Parlington is to us. But to the general public here they represent seching more than any other characters in the pece, and therefore their effect was entirely lost. Mr. Lohmann, a speculator, was very fair, but did not sing as well as assual. Miss Dainba, on the contrary, sang extremely well, and received a great deal of appliance. Mr. Ahlfelit executed sundry comic per and dances, which aforded much amusement, and confirmed the general favor with which he is invariably received by the public.

Dedworth Hall.

A large audience greated M. Hartz has evening, and testified their appreciation of his skilfully performed illusions by repeated applause. The trick of placing a cent in the middle of a card was one of the nesteet that the illusionist has ever executed. The Living Heat appeared in a new guiss. Last evening it floated in the air, to the wonderment of the audience. The evening it entertainment concluded with the beaket trick, which as usual, was received with the heartiest manifestation of pleasure.

One of the objects of the concert was to exhibit the many points of excellence of the new organ, and this the givers of the entertainment successfully attained. The "flute concerts" are cutted by Mr. Muller, a mocture. tainment successfully attained. The "flute conoerto" executed by Mr. Muller, a mocture, displaying the renowned wor hamman stop, and a medicore four handed rendering of the overture to Zampa—than which, by the way, a less proper overture for performance on the organ could hardly be selected—sufficiently demonstrated the sweetness and power of tone of the instrument. A violin solo, Ernst's Elepic, was given by Mr. Thomas artistically, but with fittle bradth of expression. Mrs. Comstock sang Haydn's aris. "With verdure chad," care fully, but withquit enhancing her vocalization with the descriptive accent essential to the rendering of the music of the masters. Mrs. Eletson, the contraits, sang an air from the stahal Mater with quite as little feeling.
Mr. Comstock's exposition of the hymn from Srzedella was good, but his voice lacias clearness and sonority.
Signor Centeneri's Picia Signore was in every respect the most astisfactory performance of the evening, the choruses, however, being very well sing.

De Cordovn at Irving Hall.

"Muss Jones' Wedding—No Cards," was the title of the above gentleman's humorous lecture last evening. Irving Ball was filled in every part, in fact rather unconfortably filled. The lecture was in every way worthy of the reputation which the lecturer has earned worthy of the reputation which the lecturer has earned far and wide, and its many points and "bon mota" gained from his hearers continued signs of appreciation. Mr. Cordova's peculiar raciness and rhyming power are certainty as prominent in this his last production as in any of his former better known compositions. The lecture throughout abounds with capital punantd local hits, as well as many exposures of the hollowness and folling of New York life and society. The philosophic searching below the surface of things, which has always charling below the surface of things, which has always charling below the surface of things, which has always charling below the surface of things, which has always charling the previous lectures in popularity, is perhaps more preceptible in "Mass Jones" woolding than in many of his previous lectures. When to all this is added the fact that the whole is delivered in really respectable flyme it is not to be wondered at that the lectures has gained which universal success. It is difficult to give any sketch of the plot of the lecture, as that is to a great extent sear fixed to the more important points to be illustrated.
